

NEI Select Maximum Growth RS Portfolio

Q4 2023 Commentary

Performance

The Fund (Series I) outperformed its blended benchmark over the quarter.

The final quarter of 2023 delivered a welcome Christmas present for investors. After the slight reality check in the first few weeks of the quarter, the remainder of the period saw strong returns across most major asset classes. The central banks' indication that the tightening cycle has likely come to an end and the possibility of interest rate cuts in 2024 boosted almost all markets.

During the quarter, both fixed income and equities delivered strong returns. The end of rate hike fears advanced both growth and value stocks. Fixed income markets were positive across the board. Expectations of early central bank cuts, tightening spreads and a weakening dollar supported positive returns.

Portfolio commentary

The NEI Select Maximum RS Portfolio (Series I) returned 8.70%. In comparison, its blended benchmark returned 8.26%.

The Portfolio outperformed over the last 3-month period as manager selection contributed to performance, which was partially offset by the out-of-benchmark allocations, while asset allocation had a minor detractor impact. On Benchmark Misfit: out-of-benchmark allocations to Global Growth and US Equities contributed while Canadian Small Cap, Emerging Markets, World Value and International Growth detracted. On Manager Selection: Majority of the underlying funds outperformed their benchmarks contributing positively, with Canadian Small Cap Equity, Global Value, Clean Infrastructure and Environmental Leaders adding the most to relative performance while Canadian Equity and US Equity underperformed the most.

Outlook

We continue to expect the effects of the monetary tightening to weigh on the economy sometime in 2024. Although the U.S. is still resilient, we are expecting further easing in the labour markets and slowdown in consumer spending to turn from a tailwind into a headwind for economic growth. That said, U.S. continues to be the strongest region relative to other developed markets in terms of growth.

The end of the unprecedented monetary tightening cycle is very near—if it isn't here already—and that provides a great entry point for fixed income investors and those with balanced portfolios. Positive real yields are starting to make the income side of the equation for bonds very attractive, plus expectations for rate cuts later in 2024 will likely add capital appreciation in the years ahead. Within our own strategic asset allocation, we are favouring high yield credit segment of the market given its attractive risk-adjusted return profile amongst asset classes. Generally speaking, the Fixed Income universe is much more attractive at this point compared to the beginning of 2023.

On the equities side we are cautious about the impact of slowing global growth on corporate earnings, coupled with valuation levels that is commensurate with the assumption of a soft landing. However, the potential easing in policy stance typically creates a very constructive environment across risk assets, therefore we are maintaining a rather neutral stance in asset allocation positioning. In manager selection, we prefer managers that focus on high quality companies that offer stability and growing dividends, especially in some regions and sectors where valuations are more reasonable on a relative basis.
